THE Institution is under the immediate direction of twenty-one Trustees; nine of them clergymen, the remainder laymen, who may be of any denomination of christians; but in the last resort, is under the controul of the Convention of the Episcopal Church. Nine Trustees form a Board, of which the Bishop is, ex officio, President, and the Principal, Vice-President. The Principal, by the Constitution of the Academy, is elected by the Convention, and must be a Clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church: The Assistant, or Assistants, are elected by the Trustees, and may be of any denomination. The Pupils are instructed in all things which form a common, or a learned Education ; and the English Language, in its Grammar, Etymology and Pronunciation, is in a very particular manner, attended to.—The Business of the Day, is opened in the Morning, and closed in the Evening, with Prayers, and the whole Government of the Academy is regulated by a judicious Body of Statutes.

The Academy-Building, is of Brick, and capable containing, with convenience, 120 Pupils.

ECLIPSES for the year 1799.

THERE will be but two Eclipses this year, and both of the Sun. The first will be May 4th, at 7 o'clock 28 minutes in the evening, invisible.

The second will be October 28th, at 45 m. 28 sec. afternoon; but the Penumbra will not quite reach our Vextex, consequently it will be invisible to us.

This Eclipse will be visible at Charleston, S. C. at half past 11 o'clock in the morning about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  digits Eclipsed on the South-westerly part of the sun.

The center of the Penumbra will first touch the Globe on the great western ocean, where the sun will rise totally Eclipsed; from thence it will take a South Easterly course, travel over the main continent of America, and exhibit a total Eclipse to all the inhabitants in those regions under its direction.

In its farther progress, the partial shade will traverse the Caribbean Sea, and West-Indies where there will be a partial visible Eclipse.

MERCURY the planet nearest the Sun, on the 7th of May, being then in his lower conjunction, will pass across the face of the sun, so that for 7 hours, he will appear like a black spot on the Sun's disk.

By calculation as follows :

	h.	m.
Mercury will begin to touch the Sun at	8	3	} morning.
Middle of the Transit,	-	11 33
Mercury leaves the Sun	-	3 3	} afternoon.
Duration of the Transit 7 hours.
Latitude of Mercury at the middle 7 min. 35 sec.

DIRECTIONS

FOR PREVENTING CALAMITIES BY

F I R E.

K EEP your chimnies and stove-pipes clean, by sweeping them at least once every month.

2. Never remove hot ashes in a wooden vessel of any kind, and look well to your ash-hole.

3. After sweeping a hearth, see that the brush does not retain any particles of fire, before you hang it up in its usual place.

4. Oblige all your servants to go to bed before you, every night, and inspect all your fire-places, before you retire to rest. For fear of accidents, let a bucket of water be left in your kitchen every night. The writer of these directions once saved his house from being consumed by fire by this precaution.

5. Do not permit a servant to carry a candle to his bed-room, if he sleeps in an unplastered garret.

6. Cover up your fire carefully every night in ashes. Let the unburnt parts of the billets or chunks of wood, be placed next the hearth, but not set upright in the corners, by which no sparks will be emitted from the wood. Pour a little water upon the burning ends of the wood which are not completely covered by the ashes.— Place before the fire a fender made of sheet iron. This contrivance was well known in England many years ago, by the name of Coverfeu. It has lately received (from a top being added to it) the name of Hood.

7. Remove papers and linen from near the fire to a remote part of the room.

8. Shut the doors of all the rooms in which you leave fire at night. By thus excluding the supply of fresh air, you will prevent a flame being kindled, should a coal or spark fall upon the floor, or upon any of the combustible matter in the room. The smoke which issues from this smothered fire, will find its way into every part of the house, and by waking the family, may save it from destruction.

9. If sickness or any other cause should oblige you to leave a candle burning all night, place it in such a situation as to be out of the way of rats. A house was once destroyed by a rat running away with a lighted candle for the sake of the tallow, and conveying it into a hole filled with rags and inflammable matters.

10. Never read in bed by candle light, especially if your bed be surrounded with curtains.

11. Strictly forbid the use of segars in your family at all times, especially at night. May not the greater frequency of fires in the United States than in former years, be ascribed in part to the more general use of segars by careless servants and children? There is good reason to believe a house was lately set on fire by a half consumed segar, which a woman suddenly threw away to prevent being detected in the unhealthy and offensive practice of smoking.

In case of fire, attend to the following directions, to prevent or restrain its terrible consequences.

1. DO not open the room or closet door where you suspect the fire to be, until you have secured your family, and your most valuable effects, nor until you have collected a quantity of water to throw on the fire, the moment a fresh supply of air excites it to a flame.—Where water cannot conveniently be had, try to smother the fire by throwing two or three blankets over it. A British sea captain once saved a king's ship by throwing himself with a spread blanket in his arms, upon a fire which had broke out near the powder room. He was pensioned for life, for this wise and meritorious act.

2. In case it be impossible to escape by a stair case from a house on fire, shut the door of your bed-chamber, and wait until help can be brought to secure your escape from a window.

3. If safety does not appear probable in this way, wrap yourselves up in a blanket, hold your breath, and rush through the flames. If water be at hand, first wet the blanket.

4. To prevent fire descending from the roof, or ascending from the first story, form by means of blankets or carpets, a kind of dam on each of the intermediate stories, near their stair case, that shall confine the water that is thrown upon the roof, or into the windows. It will effectually check the progress of the fire downwards or upwards in brick or stone houses.

5. To prevent fire spreading to adjoining houses, cover them with wet blankets or carpets, or old sails.

6. To extinguish fire in a chimney, shut the doors and windows of the room. Throwing a quart or more of common salt into the fire. Hold, or nail a wet blanket down the chimney from the roof of the house.

There is a method used in some countries of glazing chimnies when they are built, by burning common salt in them, which renders them so smooth that no soot can adhere to them. Chimnies so constructed can never take fire.

Ladders are commonly used as the means of conveying persons from the windows of houses on fire. Would not a long stiff pole, with a rope fixed on its upper end, be more portable, and convenient for this purpose?

The famous Mr. John Wesley when a child, was taken out of a window in his father's house whilst in flames, by one man standing on the shoulders of another. This practice may be used to rescue persons from the first story of a house on fire, when other means cannot be had with sufficient convenience or expedition.

Directions for the speedy and effectual extinguishing of FIRE.

1. LET water be impregnated with a solution of one or more of the following fixed salts. (1) Marine Salt.— (2) Pot or Pearl Ashes. (3) Allum. (4) Copperas.

2. Let every family keep a hoghead, or at least a barrel of this impregnated water, which should frequently be stirred. It may be kept in warm weather in an out house, in cold weather in a cellar.

3. In every engine house let a large butt mounted on wheels be kept ready for use. This may be drawn by a horse to any place where it may be wanted. To this butt, let there be fixed one or two large wooden cocks, with a short leather hose to prevent waste.

4. Should a fire be of long continuance and in danger of spreading, an additional quantity of those salts pulverised being previously provided, will soon dissolve and mix with an additional quantity of water.

The advantages of such impregnated water, above common water, are as follows.

1. IT will damp or extinguish the fire instantaneously.
2. It will prevent the burnt wood from rekindling, for when the water is evaporated the salts remain.
- Note. To prove this, let any person dip a brand of fire into common soap-lye, and then lay it on the hottest fire, or let him take the staves of a leach-barrel, in which soap has been kept, and put them in a glowing oven—and he will find that they will not easily kindle.
3. By reason of its superior weight it may be thrown with greater force against the wind.
4. A very small quantity will do more execution than a very large quantity of simple water.
5. It may be used with more success in small than large engines.
6. It will save much labour of pumping and handing of buckets, and prevent much waste of water, as in the common method.
7. If a perforated plate of brass or copper, like those on the extremity of the tube of a watering pot, be fixed with a screw to the pipe of an engine, the water may be more equally distributed over the surface of burning wood, than by one single stream. This can be of use only in small engines.

To prevent Flakes of Fire from kindling when they fall on the wooden roofs of buildings.

Take three parts (by measure) of air slacked lime, two do. of finely sifted wood-ashes, and one do. of fine sand, grind them in oil to the consistence of paint, and lay on the mixture with a brush.

Two coats will be necessary; the first thin, the second as thick as it can be conveniently worked. This coating will harden by time, and is impenetrable by flakes or even coals of fire falling on it.
